EBOLA VIRUS HIGHLIGHTS

IMPORTANCE OF

INFECTION PREVENTION

Xenex integrates germ-zapping robot with CDC Hospital protocols for outbreak response

SAN ANTONIO The arrival of the Ebola virus in the U.S. has served as a wake-up call for infection prevention in U.S. hospitals. Patients suspected of or diagnosed with an Ebola virus infection pose a risk for healthcare workers, patients and visitors. This includes the risk of transmission of Ebola within the healthcare environment; and the perception of risk, which could lead hospital staff to refuse to work with patients and discourage patients from coming to the hospital for treatment. Each risk requires hospitals to assure both healthcare workers and the public that hospitals are clean and safe, and protocols are in place to effectively disinfect the healthcare facility, including the use of state-of-the-art technology.

In support of recent Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) guidelines, and in response to President Obama's call to contain the Ebola virus, Xenex Disinfection Services has created protocols that allow for the Full Spectrum™ ultraviolet (UV) disinfection of multiple areas within a healthcare facility and the disinfection of PPE (personal protective equipment) prior to doffing by individual healthcare workers. The protocol includes disinfection of all areas where an infected patient will be transported or treated, as well as specific protocols designed to protect hospital staff, particularly during the doffing (removal) of PPE that may have become contaminated while treating a patient.

"Hospitals across the country may handle suspected Ebola cases so it's critical for every facility to have a comprehensive plan in place to ensure the safety of healthcare workers, patients and the general public," said Dr. Mark Stibich, cofounder and Chief Scientific Officer of Xenex. "We created this Ebola protocol using our experience in over 250 hospitals, as well as laboratory data on the effectiveness of Xenex's germ-zapping robots on Ebola-type viruses. Patients, communities, and hospital employees want reassurance their hospital is utilizing the most advanced technology available to protect them."

The addition of Xenex's pulsed xenon UV light disinfection technology to infection prevention protocols will reduce the environmental risk of transmission of the Ebola virus. Xenex germ-zapping robots produce high-intensity UV light that destroys the microorganisms that cause healthcare associated infections (HAI) such as Clostridium difficile (C.diff), Methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA), Enterovirus D68, VRE and Ebola. Capable of disinfecting a typical patient/procedure

Influenza vaccine

Hospital Corpsman 2nd Class Sorina M. Sidor, left, administers a seasonal influenza injectable vaccine to Machinist's Mate 1st Class Michael Lee at the Naval Base San Diego Admiral Robinson Recreation Center. The injectable vaccine, is either an "inactivated" or "recombinant" vaccine. These vaccines do not contain any live influenza virus. Flu vaccine is the best protection against flu and its complications. Flu vaccine also helps prevent spreading flu from person to person. Each year's flu vaccine is made to protect against viruses that are likely to cause disease that year. The vaccine this year protects against four different influenza viruses. Flu vaccine cannot prevent all cases of flu, but it is the best defense against the disease. It takes about two weeks for protection to develop after vaccination, and protection lasts several months to a year. It is mandatory for all Department of Defense uniformed personnel, not medically or administratively exempt, to receive the flu vaccine.

room in 5-10 minutes, the Xenex robot is easily integrated into a hospital's infection prevention program to protect against not only the Ebola virus but against all the other dangerous superbugs prevalent in hospitals today.

For healthcare workers, Xenex recommends the PPE worn by the healthcare workers be exposed to the Xenex germ-zapping robot for a period of five minutes prior to its removal. This will disinfect the PPE to reduce the risk of transmission of Ebola to the healthcare worker during the doffing process, which is known to pose a risk to healthcare workers. Xenex has tested the disinfection coverage this provides for workers, while confirming that the PPE will keep workers safe from the UV light produced by a Xenex robot. The protocol only applies to the Xenex pulsed xenon UV room disinfection system germ-zapping robots. Xenex has developed a patent-pending system to optimize the pre-doffing disinfection, making it faster, more thorough and easier on the healthcare worker.

The Xenex germ-zapping robot works by pulsing xenon, an inert gas, twice a second at high intensity in a xenon ultraviolet flashlamp. This produces ultraviolet C (UVC), which penetrates the cell walls of microorganisms including bacteria, viruses, mold, fungus and spores. Their DNA is instantly fused so that they are unable to reproduce or mutate, effectively killing them on surfaces and in the air without contact or chemicals. Xenex robots are considerably faster, safer and "greener" than other automated cleaning and infection control methods, including toxic mercury UV and hydrogen peroxide-based systems, which can take multiple hours to achieve the same level of disinfection.

Because of its use of pulsed xenon, Xenex robots are hundreds of times more powerful and intense than mercury UV systems, meaning that they can disinfect healthcare facilities in a fraction of the time it takes for mercury bulb devices. Pulsed xenon emits high intensity UVC light across a broad germicidal spectrum (200-280 nanometers versus the single spectrum of 253.7 nanometers for mercury bulbs). This broad germicidal spectrum enables Xenex devices to eliminate a wider range of pathogens at a much faster rate than mercury devices. The Xenex germ-zapping robot can disinfect a typical patient/procedure room in 5-10 minutes, as demonstrated in multiple peer-reviewed published studies.

"The risk of a patient in a U.S. hospital contracting the Ebola virus is low. The risk is much higher for a patient to contract one of the superbugs like C.diff that are prevalent in the U.S. right now -- which is why forward thinking hospitals have invested in technology to keep their patients safe," said Morris Miller, CEO of Xenex. "We are hopeful that the current attention on the Ebola virus will lead to substantial investments in infection control, including advanced technologies like our germ-zapping robots."

About Xenex Disinfection Services

Xenex's patented pulsed xenon UV room disinfection system is a pesticidal device used for the advanced cleaning of healthcare facilities. Due to its speed and ease of use, the Xenex system has proven to integrate smoothly into hospital cleaning operations. The Xenex mission is to eliminate harmful bacteria, viruses and spores that can cause hospital acquired infections in the patient environment, and to become the new standard method for disinfection in healthcare facilities worldwide. # HM3 Gonzales named 2014 Navy Pharmacy Junior Technician of the Year

By Hospitalman Thomas B. Sauer
Naval Hospital Lemoore

Naval Hospital Lemoore (NHL) Hospital Corpsman 3rd Class Gregory Gonzales, a native of Thousand Oaks, Calif., was selected as the 2014 Navy Pharmacy Junior Technician of the Year at the Joint Forces Pharmacy Seminar in Washington D.C. Oct. 22, 2014.

Gonzales' nomination for this prestigious award was for his many outstanding contributions within NHL as well as for his participation in 2014 Pacific Partnership and his active involvement in the local community.

The 2014 Pacific Partnership—a task force comprised of more than 200 personnel from active/reserve components of the U.S. Navy, Army, Air Force, and Marine Corps, 17 non-government organizations and seven foreign military partner nations, is the largest humanitarian assistance mission in the Pacific Area of Responsibility. During the deployment, Gonzales actively engaged in 10 medical missions in Cambodia and the Philippines and was directly responsible for the pharmacy set-up at different locations within these two countries. He prepared and dispensed more than 13,000 prescriptions to more than 6,000 patients.

He also volunteered more than 70 hours (painting, mixing cement and then laying it down) with Seabees from Naval Mobile Construction Battalion (NMCB) 1 conducting a major renovation in a medical facility in Da Nang, Vietnam.

In addition to his contributions to the Navy, Gonzales has been a strong community supporter. In one year, he volunteered more than 165 hours to the Kings County Fire Department and completed 32 hours of Volunteer Firefighter Level 1 training.

On May 18, he participated in fire suppression efforts that minimized property damage and he helped evacuate 40 residents in an apartment complex fire in Lemoore.

On Nov. 29, 2013, he witnessed a multiple vehicle accident in Madera County and then conducted onsite triage for seven injured individuals and instructed bystanders in first aid support while monitoring the injured victims until arrival of medical personnel. Gonzales was awarded the Navy and Marine Corps Achievement Medal for his heroic efforts that day.

A member of the Navy for only three years, Gonzales has exhibited exceptional professionalism and loyal devotion to the Navy and his fellow citizens. NHL is extremely proud of him, his accomplishments and his impressive award as this year's Navy Junior Pharmacy Technician of the Year.
